| F202204 | Before & After Civil War & 1886 Earthquake | Wed., Sept. 28 | 12:30 pm – 4:30 pm | Leader: Linda |
| Charleston was badly damaged by the Union Army during the Civil War. The Union soldiers burnt much of Charleston. Much of what wasn't destroyed during the war fell after the August 31, 1886 earthquake which left more than 100 people dead and hundreds of buildings destroyed. This was the largest recorded earthquake in the history of the southeastern United States. Despite witnessing so much destruction, Charleston has been able to restore many of its historic structures. Hear from an expert tour guide about what Charleston was like before and after these devastating events. Our guide will have large before & after photos to show us. | | | | |

| F202217 | Doin' the Charleston Renaissance | Tues., Oct. 18 | 9:00 am-1:00 pm | Leader: Lynn |
| In the Antebellum era, Charleston was one of the ten largest cities in America. The Civil War destroyed the city's prosperity, and the economic after-effects lingered through the Reconstruction era into the early 20th century. Beginning around World War I, however, the city experienced a renaissance in the arts as the local art community worked on bettering their city and representing it in various media. A culture phoenix rising from the ashes of the Civil War and Reconstruction, the Charleston Renaissance roared into the 1920s as artists, writers, musicians, poets, and preservationists revitalized the city's social, cultural and artistic identity. This 2 hour walking tour takes you back in time as you visit sites associated with icons such as DuBose Heyward, Elizabeth O'Neil Verner, Josephine Pinckney, John Bennett and the Jenkins Band to name a few. This is a moderate WALKING tour. | | | | |
